Unemployment Rate Drops

The unemployment rate for Milam County decreased slightly, from 3.3 to 3.2 percent during August, according to the Texas Employment Commission.

Milam-Areans

City Hires Appraiser

ROCKDALE

City council members in Rockdale signed up a professional tax appraiser at an estimated cost of $24,800. Mayor N. E. Alford signed the city's contract with the appraiser but he did so by again stating his opposition to the move. Mayor Alfrod said he was in favor of the re-appraisal work but said he believes the city could get a local person to do the job for $10,000.

School Referendum Set

BELTON

Belton Independent School District voters will have a chance Oct. 30 to express their preference for the kind of school expansion--a new high school on the 50-acre tract of land owned by the school district on Lake Road or a middle school at Harris School.

City To Sue Delinquents

HEARNE

The Hearne city councilhas voted to enter a contract with an Austin law firm to file suits against owners of property inside the city limits who are at least five years delinquent in payment of property taxes to the city. City Atty. Bill Palmos said this action could promote new ownership of the property and make it active on the city tax rolls once again.

State School Escapee Caught

GATESVILLE

A 16-year-old Gatesville State School student who pointed a loaded 12-gauge shotgun at DPS trooper David Jund was apprehended during the Tuesday afternoon confrontation on the reform school campus when a young social worker persuaded him to surrender. The shotgun was taken from a pickup stolen by the youth after he fled the state school.

Gun Thefts Reported

BURNET

In a rash of gun burglaries during a six-day period, four Burnet County homes have been burglarized and fireamrs valued at roughly $10,000 have been reported stolen. Burnet County chief deputy Weldon Buck said it was a good possibility that all the burglaries are connected. He said two similar gun burglaries were reported in Lampasa s County and the burglaries follow a similar pattern.

Band Wins $1,000

McGREGOR

The McGregor Bulldog Band won first place trophy and $1,000 at the Cotton Bowl Parade of Champions marching contest in Dallas last Monday. The band marched in the six-band Class IV and was selected along with Hillsboro and Merkel to compete in the finals Monday night. This is the fourth time the band has competed in the contest, winning second in 1973 and third in 1975.

Pumpkin Contest Planned

CALDWELL

The Caldwell Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a Pumpkin Carving Contest in celebration of Halloween. The contest will take place Saturday, Oct. 23 from 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. in the courthouse square in Caldwell. Probable entries will include national political figures, local officials, movie stars, and Holloween characters.

Volunteers Sought To Help Befriend City's Welfare Folks

How would you feel if you were blind, disabled, or counted as one of the many aged who are trying to live on $167.50 a month and face days of loneliness and helplessness feeling that no one cares much how you are getting on?

Cameron and Milam County have many such persons, and the local welfare office is trying to evoke interest in a volunteer program to aid these neighbors and friends who need someone to help them and care for them in ways not available from welfare personnel.

Roy Boutwell, adult services supervisor for Milam and 9 other counties, said the volunteer program would hopefully involve the community in working with welfare clients, bringing a better understanding of their position and needs.

"These folks need someone to talk to, someone to read to them, provide transportation and in other ways become a friend," Boutwell said. "They are not the 'mysterious welfare clients'--they are your relatives, neighbors and friends."

He said if the program gets started, volunteers' skills would be matched to the needs of the elderly or disabled, such as a carpenter spending some of his spare time mending one of the homes, a gardner doing some yard work, or someone helping to clean house for a disabled person.

The welfare department's family services division can spend just enough for each needy person to have 24 hours service a week, and Boutwell said if it weren't for these services, the needy would have to be put in a nursing home instead of being able to stay in their own homes.

"Everyone has some talent, or something they can do to be of service to these people," Boutwell said. "We would match up the volunteer's skills with some need. We are in the process of looking at each of our cases to see what each individual needs."

The clients are recipients of SSI, or supplementary income from the social security program, and receive only $167.80 a month to live on. They are eligible for food stamps, but still face the acute problems of inflation.

Boutwell said a volunteer program would help educate the community as to who these people are and what they are up against. He said many people think only of persons on the west side of Cameron when welfare recipient is mentioned.

He added that if enough people volunteer to help, training classes can be held by a state welfare office staff which is paid to develop volunteers.

Boutwell emphasized that the rights of welfare persons for privacy and confidentiality would be honored and clients would be protected in the process of any volunteer program.

He said his office serves some 127 aged, blind or disabled persons in the county and are breaking that figure down into the number served in Cameron.

Anyone wishing to be a volunteer for this program of help for the needy is asked to contact Boutwell at his office at 704 W. 6th St., or call 697-2161.

Shell Study Underway In County

Three citizens' advisory panels have been selected to liaison with Shell Oil Company in its socioeconomic study of the impact of proposed surface mining on the Milam County area.

The panels represent Milam County and Milano, and the cities of Cameron and Rockdale. Milam County Judge O. B. Harden, Rockdale Mayor N. E. Alford and Cameron Mayor Lawrence P. Zotz selected their respective committee members and serve as chairmen.

Radian Corporation of Austin, Shell's environmental consultant, has hired Ms. Adreanin A. Ross, Ph. D., Social Science Research Associate, to conduct interviews, gather and research information and write the socioeconomic report.

The Milam County advisory group selected by Judge Harden includes: Adolph Gresak, commissioner; LaVert C. McKinney, commissioner; Gerald Vinton, commissioner; Curtis Hines, commissioner; Wayne B. Wieser, county clerk; John Henderson, Jr., county attorney - elect, and Leroy Broadus, sheriff - elect. Also, Milano representatives will be E. C. Westbrook, merchant and C. R. Martin, superintendent of schools.

Mayor Alford's appointments from Rockdale are: W. P. Hogan, Gaither Motor Company; Dr. W. C. Vincent, Jr., superintendent, Rockdale Independent School District; W. T. Pearson, Jr, real estate; Charles M. Upshaw, administrator, Richards Memorial Hospital; James E. Lafferty, area missionary; J. L. Banks, rancher; Bill Cooke, Jr., co-owner Rockdale Reporter; and Duncan McGregor, ALCOA plant manager.

Cameron Mayor Zotz named panel members: Sister M. Pauline, administrator, St. Edward Hospital; A. W. McCullin, executive director, Cameron Community Development Agency; John H. Davis, president, Citizens National Bank; Lester Williams, president, First National Bank, Gene Smitherman, manager, KMIL Radio; Frank Luecke, editor and owner, Cameron Herald; Buddy Dulin, superintendent of schools, and Odell Biggs, principal, both of the Cameron Independent School District; and Rev. Darrell Proffit, president, Cameron Ministerial Association.

County OKs Medallion For Museum

County commissioners meeting in regular session Thursday morning approved purchase of an official state historical medallion to be placed on the county jail as requested by the county historical committee.

The medallion will be installed on the jail wall on the front porch and will give a brief history of the old structure Cost is $125, much less than an historical marker on a post which was previously considered by the committee.

In other business, commissioners agreed to advertise for bids on a new radar unit for the highway patrol troopers stationed in Rockdale. The unit will be similar to the one now being used by troopers Milton Wright and Scott Douglas from Cameron.

The court authorized County Judge O. B. Harden to submit an application to the Criminal Justice Division for funds to pay a county probation officer's salary.

It was agreed to pay expenses for Commissioner Gerald Vinton to attend a commissioners' conference in Amarillo and for County Auditor John Andres to attend a convention in Galveston.

Judge Harden read a letter he wrote to county election judges, notifying them of their appointment and naming alternate judges. It will be left up to the judges to hire the necessary number of clerks.

Commissioners approved a plat of a new subdivision eight miles north of Davilla, named Agape Ranches. Owner Herman Neusch submitted the plat and reported that he has built the roads for the subdivision, which will be made up of five-acre tracts.

Judge Harden told the court that Harris, Havens & Co., the firm that conducted the county audit, will come to help set up the new bookkeeping system for the county recommended by the firm.

300 Tour Museum

More than 300 visitors toured the Milam County Museum when it opened last Saturday with exhibits in a couple of the rooms and in the hall.

The museum committee, meeting last week, reported that the new facility, housed in the old county jail, now has enough display cases and is still awaiting installation of protective bars over the downstairs windows.

After the building is made secure, many donations or loans of items for exhibiting are expected, as wide interest has been shown in the museum, said MaryBelle Batte, committee chairman.

Committee members tabled decision on how many days a week the museum would be open, but agreed that spring and summer would probably bring out more visitors than the winter months.

Museum committee members expressed thanks to the following people who helped get the facility ready to open last Saturday:

Display cases--Mrs. Dwight Moody. Mrs. Bassel Wilson, and the Weems family, who contributed cases from the old Weems store.

Those helping with exhibits included: Paul Nabours, Mrs. John Henderson Sr., Mrs. Jaro Matula, Jan Burke, Mrs. William Fannin, Goodhue Smith, Mrs. Steve Epperson, the Batte dolls, Mrs. Rachel Graves, Mrs. Helen Abel, Lanny Dusek, Inez Angell, Mrs. Conrad Jekel, Virginia Sanders, and Mrs. George Graves.

The Yoe High Junior Historians acted as hosts during the day on Saturday at the museum.

DR. PEPPER GIVES - Ted Floca, president of the Temple Dr. Pepper Bottling Co., and Johnnie Barrett, local distributor, contribute a check for $600 for the youth exposition building fund to Brenda Hoelscher, fund treasurer. This brings the fund total to $60,600.

Coup Today, Gone Tomorrow

Mao Tse-Tung's widow is one of the first to feel the absence of her omnipotent husband's power.

Once a fill-in for Mao while he was thought to be dying a few years ago, Chiang Ching and three other ultra-leftists have been arrested in Peking. Charge?: Trying to overthrow transitional government which is in the hands of conservative-moderates.

She was arrested sometime in early October, along with the second vice-chairman, the first vice-premier, and a leading idealogue.

The fourth wife of Chairman Mao, made a last public appearance about September 30. Mao died in September. And representatives of other nations have been excluded from his funeral, period of national mourning, and subsequent events.

It would seem the voices of modernization will be heard in the post-Mao period of reorganization of the Chinese Mainland Communist Party and Peking central government. This is a sign of continued detente with the U. S. and the prospect of new overtures to Russia.

What did the Red Dean in England once say: "Better red than dead"?

For a time, Mainland China will remain in an era of reconciliation, finding it pointless to maintain the militancy of peot-revolutionary Mao.

As for his wife, apparently loyal all the way to Manchurian exile, it was coup today, "gone tomorrow."

What Others Say...

The Last Bow . . .

Some will call it sheer, backward-looking stubbornness; others will say that it is gallant defiance. Call it what you will. The doughtiness of the last day lily is, in any case, something to behold.

Does not this thin, graceful swatch of scarlet have any idea what the season is? The yellow-green leaves of the mulberry could testify that summer is past, and so could the shriveled blossoms of the cannas. These are aristocrats who acknowledge, resignedly, that the revolution has washed over them. A new order of things is in the making.

And yet the last day lily seems oblivious to the changing times. Its neck rears as proudly as in the high noon of springtime. It curls its lip disdainfully at so much yellowness as surrounds it.

What has produced such a renaissance? Not for weeks has a day lily so much as blinked an eye; there have been no blossoms, just green leaves. Of a sudden, here is the last specimen of a haughty race, defining for one last time the meaning of natural splendor.

The spider lilies, parvenus of the new order, know themselves unable to compete. They merely stand watching enviously, knowing well enough that in due course theirs will be the only real color extant in a world of yellows and browns.

But for the moment--that is all that is allowed to it--here is one of the royalty of springtime, dressed as though autumn had never happened; as though the season of life and growth would go on forever. It will not, of course. But no one can blame the last day lily for wishing it were so.

Oceans: Our Continuing Frontier

Visions Of The Sea

By John Wilmerding

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of 16 articles in the series "Oceans: Our Continuing Frontier." In the following article, John Wilmerding discusses how the impact of the sea on our national experience has been reflected in American painting. The author is the Leon E. Williams Professor of Art at Dartmouth College. These articles, which explore the whole range of human involvement with the sea, were written for Courses by Newspaper, a program developed by the University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The sea was the first experience in the American consciousness; the shore a first edge of a geographic and mental territory expanding thereafter westward and futureward.

Leaving different points in Europe, driven by various pressures from home and towards various aspirations afar, adventurers pushed into the New World across half a millennium and all of the Atlantic. For them discovery, exploration, and settlement were shared visions.

Paradoxically, their original "terra incognia" was the ocean itself. To cross it seemed interminable and treacherous, but its horizons were thought to hold out both physical well-being and spiritual salvation.

Thus the New World that was to become American inspired a combination of awe and fear, of impoverishment and riches, and of known and unknown promises.

This earliest frontier existed in the fragments of measured coastlines and incomplete charts, where the endless vastness might terminate in at least partial distillation or containment.

It is no surprise that this earliest experience of discovery, record, and possession should metaphorically wash across the subsequent years and terrain of American history and geography. Both the reality of western expansion and the myth of the open frontier have animated the American imagination up to the present day. Pioneers of the 19th century conjured an image of sailing across seas of waving grass in their prairie schooners, while the terminology of navigation continues to apply to contemporary astronauts who venture to the oceans of the moon. And a national hymn sings of the country stretching "from sea to shining sea."

These visions of the sea were early translated into art. Among the earliest paintings and drawings done in the New World were watercolors and drawings dating from the English and French expeditions in the late 16th century. They show a shoreline full of natural resources and inhabited by ideally proportioned Indians.

Later, ambitious colonies would rise on this seaboard, and, well into the 19th century, life and commerce on the sea would play a crucial role in the new country's development. Colonial portraits often contain references to shipping in background views as appropriate emblems of a sitter's profession or experience.

RISING NATIONALISM

By the opening years of the 19th century, the full tide of the romantic movement began to turn American taste strongly towards full-scale seascapes and nature subjects. Such interest reflected a young country increasingly equating its raw and beautiful wilderness with the national identity.

With the Revolution and then with the War of 1812, American artists were called upon to create a fresh imagery of virtually instant national heroes and heroic events--just as other media do now. Paintings of naval engagements were appropriately vivid in coloring, strong tonal contrasts, and turbulent effects of war trasts, and turbulent effects of water and clouds. As such, they embody a concentration of energy and vitality deriving specifically from the depicted events, but more generally from a national spirit of triumph over the British in those years.

At the same time, several artists took up painting views along the Atlantic coast, delineating both the growing shipping activity and the dramatic appeal of America's eastern coastline. Pictures by artists like Thomas Birch and Robert Salmon tend to be crowded with people, myriad activities, dense skyline shapes, and lively light effects. While their work on a documentary level faithfully records the physical shape of this period's rapid growth in population, building, and commerce, it conveys further to us a broader spirit of national prosperity, ambition, and self-confidence.

AN AMERICAN FRONTIER

The northeast coast remained especially appealing to subsequent generations, and Maine in particular attracted many painters throughout the middle years of the century. The coast was bold and rugged, beautiful, and in places spectacular, isolated, and untouched. It was an essential embodiment of America's concept and reality of the frontier. Alvan Fisher and Thomas Cole were painting in the Mount Desert region during the mid-1840s. Fitz Hugh Lane and Frederick Church came in the next decades, and others followed. They were impressed with the stormy turbulence of the offshore waters, hidden ledges, rising promontories, and the powerful moods of weather. Lane concentrated on capturing the qualities of transient light and atmosphere. This manner of painting (now called luminism) stresses nature's higher spiritual order and tranquility, inviting from the viewer an attitude of poetic reverie and contemplation.

During the 1860s and 1870s, however, deep polarities of mood emerged in American landscape and marine painting. Simultaneously, and almost schizophrenically, artists painted tranquil as well as explosive scenes, quiet coastal panoramas beside violently threatening storms. Almost unconsciously, art bore the dark and brooding strains of national tension during the Civil War period and its aftermath.

By the end of the 1870s a new form of graver, more contemplative realism emerged. Foremost in this style were Winslow Homer and Thomas Eakins, whose work increasingly suggested notes of poignant elegy, thoughful seriousness, and powerful human drama.

ABSTRACTION VS. REALISM

In contrast to the first half of the 19th century, American painting in the latter half saw the perplexing appearance of a multiplicity of styles, sometimes inconsistent and lacking logical developement. This, too, was an index of the age's insecurities. Some artists like Albert Ryder turned inward, seeking the mystery of the inner mind and world of dreams. Others, like James Whistler, turned to forms of personal abstraction and artistic formalism; and yet others like William Morris Hunt of Childe Hassam turned to adaptations of impressionism.

These various currents carried into the new century as the conflicts between realism and abstraction continued to intensify. The coast maintained its hold on the imagination of such major figures as George Bellows, Edward Hopper, and Andrew Wyeth. Meanwhile, other American painters struggled to come to terms with European modernism.

THE NEW INDUSTRIALISM

During the 20th century New York became a major center for American painters: here was the new industrial and technological landscape. As photographed by Alfred Steiglitz or painted by John Marin, Bellows, and others, it was seen not only as a city but as a port, recalling once again in modern terms America's passage and passage and passengers to and from Europe.

During the 1940s and 1950s Milton Avery and Mark Rothoko brought painting into almost total abstraction. They suggest vast environments of mood and feeling, possessing vague allusions to bands of earth, sea, or sky, suffused in light and colors more expressive of inner sensations than outer actualities.

The voyage and the frontier persist as a vital experience today in American art as in American life.

For some, it is a voyage inward to the self, for others a journey outward to the oceans of space.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Charles W. Engel
Route 2, Box 129
Lott, Texas 76656

Dear Mr. Engel:

I was interested to read your letter in The Cameron Herald today with your comments about my proposal to reduce the school term from 180 days to 171.

Obviously I would disagree with your reasoning and most certainly your assessment that I am using this as a "backdoor" attempt to increase teacher salaries. As my newsletter indicated, teacher salaries would not be affected. Their preparation time would be the same. They're still going to be working as many days as they are now.

Who will be affected are the pupils who won't have to sit in hot, sweltering classrooms, who have to fight to stay awake and interested in their studies and not think about the Labor Day holiday right around the corner.

It is true, some schools are air-conditioned these days, but according to a recent survey 67 per cent of Texas schools do not enjoy this luxury. And regretably, with the high costs of operation and maintenance of schools, many districts -- right here in Williamson, Falls and Milam Counties -- do not have the luxury of having enough money to air-condition their buildings.

You mention the quarter-school system and a more efficient use of scheduling as a possible answer. You probably are aware that Texas now has a quarter system for schools and my proposal to reduce the term would greatly facilitate use of the quarter system. The 171 day school term would be divided into three 57 day terms which would easily lend itself to a fourth quarter.

I had a letter from one teacher who said she favored the idea of reducing the term. The pupils learn "between the first 'norther' and Easter," she wrote. We don't get that many "northers" down here but I think it's common knowledge that there is a time at the first of learning, educational processes that serves as an introductory, orientation time for the student to his subject. It's a time of the student "getting his feet on the ground," if you will. Since the basic, learning process doesn't begin until later in the fall, why put the youngsters through the tedious, boring routine of school in the heat?

That same lady also had a good point when she said that if students are going to learn a subject, they'll learn it in 171 days as easily as they will in 180. Your very statement that if students aren't being taught now in 180 days. they won't be taught in 171 days, serves as a kind of converse logic for my idea, too.

I appreciate your suggestions for other ways we might encourage and enhance education. You mention too much emphasis on the "non-essentials," like sports, etc. I'm not really sure of how these arguments affect my proposal and as you surely know, whether a school has a sports or any other extra-curricular program is entirely up to the local school district and its taxpayers. I would never try to invoke my personal ideas about these programs and their merits or demerits on the local citizens who do now -- and should -- make their own decisions about this.

I like your statement that our youth are our most valuable asset, too. We're in complete agreement on that and I assure you that I'll be working to see that our youth have the best possible education offering but at the same time, seeing to it that it's delivered by the most efficient means for the taxpayers who are footing the bill.

Sincerely,
Dan Kubiak

P. S. I invite your comments and encourage you to write me direct for I try to answer all letters that come through my office.

To the Editor:

I am a high school student from Waco. Last Saturday I was campaigning in Cameron for Jack Burgess who is running for Congress. We were passing through town in the "Burgess Vanwagon" when we saw the Cameron Arts & Crafts show. I just wanted to write to thank all those nice people who welcomed us so kindly Even the man at the Jimmy Carter booth was nice!

This is the first time I've even been involved in a campaign and it has been quite an experience. Jack Burgess has helped me understand what America is all about. I hope that young people like myself will always be as welcomed as we were in Cameron when we try to do something for America. Thanks again to all those people who helped me learn about America and your town.

Sincerely,
Ann Mansfield

FRANCEVILLE. GABON

Gabon's flamboyant President Bongo is relying on a policy of dialogue at home and pro-western leanings abroad to unify his country and speed up its development. The dialogue is essential in a country with some 60 tribes speaking as many languages and dialects. The language barrier is such that French remains the state's official language and often the only means of communication between tribes.

MILLE, ETHIOPIA

Security forces patrolling the vital road to the Red Sea port of Assab have encountered a number of incidents involving guerrillas of the Afar liberation front in recent weeks, according to informed sources in the area. Military sources said one of the latest incidents occurred on Sept. 11 on the dirt road to Assaita, the main town for afar tribes in northeastern Ethiopia, when a local bus was overturned by what was apparently an explosive device.

CALCUTTA

A factional power struggle inside West Bengal's ruling congress party has made the rest of India sit up and take notice. An attempt by different sections of the party to unseat Chief Minister Siddartha Shankar Ray is on one level of mere domestic squabble in a state whose volatility is a byword. However, many observers believe the affair could have much broader implications in the long term.

SAN SALVADOR

El Salvador's normally conservative government has taken its first cautious steps to break up big estates for the benefit of landless peasants. The project is a very modest first attempt to solve the chronic problems of rural poverty and underemployment in the most crowded country on the American continent. But El Salvador's small and tightly knit aristocracy of landowners accuse Col. Arturo Molina's government of using arbitrary and unconstitutional methods against them.

WASHINGTON

A squadron of British-built Harrier jump-jet fighters will shortly be moved to the Mediterranean for their first operational test aboard an American aircraft carrier. U. S. officials said the three-month test of the 14 U.S. Marine Corps Harriers aboard the carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt later this year will help determine whether the vertical take-off and landing plane will be suitable for US attack carrier operations.

TEL AVIV

A lean determined rabbi with the look of a Biblical prophet is at the center of a battle of wills between the Israeli government and diehard Jewish settlers in occupied Arab areas. The latest stage in the confrontation ended in compromise when, after a three-day siege of his west bank home by Israeli soldiers, Rabbi Moshe Levinger surrendered. An order for his arrest had been issued after he violated an army order limiting his movemehts.

BEIRUT

Beirut's hotels, like all other institutions in this tortured capital, have had to make violent adjustments to survive 17 months of civil war. Unfortunately, the city's big three hotels were never given time to adjust. The Holiday Inn and the Pheonicia, with their commanding heights, and the Saint-Georges, with its key seafront position, almost a year ago became strategic frontline fortresses in the fighting between the bar and the barber shop.

Yoe Rallies To Whip R-L Cougars, 20-9

JIMMY ZALESKY upends Rosebud-Lott running back #44 Larry Johnson. The Yoe Fence continues to be the powerful link in the '76 campaign. Steven Hollas, #65, and Clay Kruse, #71, for the Yoemen swarm around to give assistance. The Yoe Fence held the Cougars to 20 yards offense the second half. Mike Peck photo.

Facing a 3 point deficit after two quarters of play the Cameron Yoemen sprang back to defeat the Rosebud-Lott Cougars 20-9 in a rainy Homecoming football game Friday in District 23AA action at Yoe Field.

A spirited attack by the Cougars went to shambles the second half and the Yoemen took advantage by scoring in the two final quarters.

The first half was a dreary one for the Yoemen as was the weather.

The Cougars took the early lead by capitalizing on a Yoe mistake when Greg Kelley failed to handle a punt and #72 Johnny Bailey of Rosebud-Lott recovered on the Yoe 7.

The Yoe Fence held the Cougars until 4th and 1. Larry Johnson plunged over the line to give the Cougars a quick lead with 7:02 showing in the first quarter. The PAT failed.

John McIntyre intercepted a misguided pass from Cougar quarterback C. E. Wolf to set the Yoemen up on the Cougar 30.

The Yoemen took full advantage of the break and in 7 plays covered 30 yards of home turf to knotch the score 6-6.

John Schmidt plowed his way to pay dirt from one yard out with 2:57 remaining in the half. James Thompson's boot was wide to the right leaving the score at 6-6.

With 42 seconds remaining in the first half the Cougars attempted a 35 yard field goal that sailed wide to the right and the Yoemen took over on their own 20.

With 15 seconds still showing in the first half Yoe punter Donald Komar couldn't handle the snap and the Cougars got a second big break. and took over on the Yoe 211 yard line.

The Cougars lined up in field goal formation and David Perez's boot was true to the mark, giving the Cougars a 9-6 halftime lead on the 31 yard field goal.

The Cougars owned the stat charts in the first half with 102 yards rushing to the Yoe's 36. In the passing department the Yoemen had the edge with 39 to the Cougars 18. Both teams had 5 first downs and each lost one fumble.

The halftime break served as a needed pit-stop for the Yoemen.

The Yoe offense started running with precision in the final two quarters, picking up 201 yards of real estate while the awesome Yoe Fence held the Cougars to only 30 yards offense the second half.

The Yoemen took control of the ball with 6:50 in the third quarter and marched 50 yards in 9 plays before Errol Spells high-stepped into pay dirt, giving the Yoemen a 12-9 lead.

Spells danced up the middle on the two point conversion try and stood tall for the conversion, and the Yoemen took command 14-9.

In the final quarter the Yoemen added the insurance policy when Spells made his second TD.

The final Yoe TD came after a smooth ground attack that covered 89 yards in 15 plays and consumed 6:52 minutes of the clock.

Spells powered his way across the magic line from 3 yards out. With 5:08 remaining Thompson's boot was unsuccessful and the Yoemen led 20-9.

The Cougars possessed the ball for only 3 plays the entire fourth quarter, and with the final seconds clicking away, the Yoemen rested at the door steps of the Cougar end zone. The Yoemen were resting on the Cougar one foot line.

In the final quarter the Cougars had a negative 6 yards offense and for the entire second half the Cougars added only 20 yards to their first-half total.

Errol Spells, with 2 touchdowns, led the running attack for the Yoemen, picking up 90 yards in 18 carries. John Schmidt followed with 57 yards in 12 carries with 40 yards in the closing quarter. Schmidt scored once.

Yoe QB Bobby Burton scampered 52 yards in 8 carries along with David Rosemond with 30 yards in 7 carries.

For the Cougars, Larry Johnson scored the only TD and led the rushing with 53 yards in 7 carries. Cougar QB C. E. Wolf tallied 32 yards in 13 carries.

Jimmy Zalesky led the Yoe defensive attack along with David Delony and Richard Raymond and contained the Cougars.

The Yoemen stand 2-1 in district action while the Cougars are 0-2. The Cougars have not won a ballgame in the past 17 outings that covers three years of winlessness.

The Yoemen will face Caldwell in district action Friday night in Caldwell.

Rockdale Tigers Walk Over Manor, 28-0

Rain or reign--a little of both--for the Rockdale Tigers as they corraled the Manor Mustangs 28-0 in a rain-swamped District 23AA contest at Manor Field.

Tiger halfback Gary Wright started things off in the scoring department. With 7:07 on the clock Wright sailed 2 yards into the end zone. It was a well executed series of plays for the Tigers driving the wet pigskin 63 yards in 10 plays.

Mario Garza's boot was good and the Tigers led 7-0.

Wright did everything right for the Tigers in the first quarter, carrying the ball for a whopping 103 yards in the first stanza.

A 60-yard drive culminated in the second Tiger score when QB Kerry Locklin blasted across from three yards out. The drive took only nine plays with Wright carrying for the bulk of the 60 yards.

Garza's kick was true to the mark giving the Tigers a 14-0 lead.

The Tigers continued to dominate the one sided offensive battle when Insenell Richards scampered 24 yards of Manor real estate for the second quarter TD. Again Garza with the PAT, and the Tigers led 21-0.

On the halftime stat charts the story of the Blue-Gold dominance continued with the Mustangs only picking up one first down, which came on a penalty.

The Tiger offense geared down after half and the final Tiger TD came n the final stanza when Locklin plunged across from two yards out. Garza's PAT was good, giving the Tigers a 28-0 district lead.

The only thing that resembled a scoring threat came in the final quarter after the Tigers were called for pass interference that set the Mustangs up on the two yard line, but the Mustangs failed to convert.

The Tigers now stand 3-0 in district competition and are 6-0 for the season. The Mustangs dropped to 1-2 in district action.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Milano Downs Holland

MILANO

In a see-saw battle that went down to the wire the Milano Eagles out-fought the Holland Hornets 12-10. The Hornets got on the board in the first uarter on a 20-yard field goal by Eddie Arnold. The 3 points held until the third quarter when Eagle quarterback David Gunnels rambled 30 yards for the TD. A 2-point conversion try failed. Holland took the lead when Greg Goodnight plunged across from one yard out. The PAT was good, giving the Hornets a 10-6 lead. In a superman effort Gunnels connected with David Westbrook on a 30-yard TD pass. The PAT failed and the Eagles edged the Holland Hornets 12-10 in district action.

Lions Upset Eagles

GRANGER

It was Homecoming 176 for the Grager Lions Friday night, but it was upset night for the Rogers Eagles when the Lions sneaked past the powerful Eagles 7-0. In the rain drenched football contest neither offensive team was able to rally giving way to a defensive headknocker. The only score came on a Lion defensive effort by defensive end Freddie Blane, who stole the option handoff from Eagle quarterback Larry Clowes. Blane ignited the after-burners and went untouched for the only TD of the entire evening. The Eagles owned the game everywhere except where it counts, on the scoreboard. The Eagles had 10 first downs to the Lions' 4 and the Eagles had 197 yards rushing to the Lions 149.

Hearne Falls To Falke

HEARNE

A quick introduction of Elroy Falke was given to the Hearne Eagles Friday night as Falke and team downed the Eagles 14-0. The Elgin Wildcats had little trouble in capturing the all important district win. The question for the Eagles was--who is Elroy Falke and how do you stop him? The Eagles found out who the little sophomore running back was, but they definitely couldn't stop him. Falke scored from 35 yards out and again on an [illegible] yard scamper. Falke covered 245 yards of foreign turf in 16 carries.

Hornets Edge Panthers

PFLUGERVILLE

Close only counts in horse shoes and washers as the old story goes, and Pflugerville was close behind the Caldwell Hornets, 18-14. Williams opened the scoring for the Hornets from 3 yards out and the PAT failed. The Panthers took command on a 47-yard TD pass. The Hornets scored twice on runs by John Ayers from 3 yards out and 48 yards in the second quarter. The Panthers scored in the second quarter on a 38-yard TD pass from Lancaster to Havins. The Hornets remained undefeated in District 23AA action while the Panthers remain winless in their first three outings.

Texas Guard To Host Reunion

Giving a new tradition a good start, the Texas Guard is again hosting a reunion of retired Texas Guardsmen.

The Texas Guard Second Annual Muster will bring together retired Texas Guardsmen from sergeants to generals to "inspect" the Texas Guard.

This year's reunion will again be held at the Texas Guard headquarters, Camp Mabry in Austin, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Sunday, November 7.

"We are inviting all our retired members to look us over and see what we have accomplished during the past year," claims State Adjutant General Major General Thomas S. Bishop.

"We don't want our retired Guardsmen to loose touch with the changes in the modern Guard. We would like them to know what we are doing and what we are building," said Bishop. "We are proud of our accomplishments and we want all our Guardsmen to be proud of them as well."

The time of this year's reunion will be "Growth in '76."

Returning Guardsmen will be given a grand tour of the new 49th Armored Division armory under construction at Camp Mabry. The new facility will be one of the largest armories in the country. Designed to provide training facilities for 1000 members of the 49th Armored Division, the building is one of several new armories and flight facilities the Texas Guard is constructing throughout the state.

New facilities at other locations will be presented to retired Guardsmen. They will also have the chance to see other newly completed construction at Camp Mabry, in addition to the 49th Amrored Division armory.

Guardsmen will have the opportunity to tour the newest and one of the largest military warehouses in the country, see how the Texas Guard run an airborne school and what goes on at a parachute packing and maintenance shop.

But not to be overlooked is the reminiscing over a plate of Texas-style barbecue. One of the days events is centered around an open air barbecue wagon. While reviewing the assault on Anzio, the capture of Rome, Guardsmen who served there and at other locations and times will have the opportunity to meet other Guardsmen they have served with but may not have seen in some time.

Returning Guardsmen will also be among the first to see the newly opened Heritage Room at Camp Mabry as well look over new Texas Guard equipment on display.

Helicopter rappeling training by Troop D, First of the 124th Cavalry and a black powder shoot and competition hosted by the Guard of the Republic will close out the day's activities.

TJC Auto Mechanics Expanding

Auto mechanic students at Temple Junior College are benefiting from an expanded program and new facilities and equipment this year.

Stanley Churchill, dean of Technical and Vocational Education, said construction is almost complete on the new building which will be used by the automotive department. He noted that the old shop, which includes eight bays, has been reorganized and that the department has added new furnishing and teaching equipment. "Besides having one of the better-equipped shops in the area, it is available for use more hours during the day than ever before," Churchill said.

TJC revamped its automotive program this fall, going from a one-year certificate program to a two-year program which leads to the Associate in Applied Science degree. The two-year program is based on a career ladder concept which allows a student the option of obtaining various levels of proficiency.

A student may sign up for only one course which will increase his efficiency in a particular field or the complete two-year program.

"We are using the latest in equipment, teaching techniques and the latest technical information in our program," Churchill said. "Classrooms with special equipment provide the student with the opportunity for self improvement through individual study. We are using carrels with tape and slide presentations and other specialized teaching equipment."

Colonial Nursing Home

A domino tournament was enjoyed by residents of the Cameron and Colonial Nursing Homes. Those attending the tournament were: Mrs. Alice Terry, Mrs. Eva Lott, Mrs. Frances Stoebner, Thomas Williams, Oren McAnualty, Mrs. Lola Davis, Mrs. Lula Wilkerson, Mrs. Josie Weide, Mrs. Alma Crain, Mrs. Gertrude Harris, Mrs. Altha Lesikar, J. John Henderson Jr. was speaker at the Sunday Church Service Oct. 10.

The Ministerial Association has been furnishing us with a minister for our Thursday worship service.

Nelson To Perform At Six Flags

Willie Nelson, the king of progressive country music, will perform in two concerts Saturday, Oct. 23 at Six Flags Over Texas. Shows are scheduled at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the theme park's Music Mill Theater.

Nelson's musical career has taken him everywhere from the small taverns along Fort Worth's Jacksboro Highway to packed auditoriums in Las Vegas, Los Angeles, and New York City.

He began playing professionally 33 years ago at the age of 10. For playing rhythm guitar with a Bohemian polka band in West, not far from his hometown in the North Central Texas town of Abbot, Nelson received $10.

Later in his early 20s, he played and sang where he could and supported his wife and child by such a variety of trades as selling vacuum cleaners, Bibles and encyclopedias and working on radio station in Fort Worth, Houston and Oregon.

Deep-Sea Sub Probes Oceans

Never before have men penetrated so far into the earth's crust to see and sample its internal layers.

Using Alvin, a deep-sea submersible, scientists recently descended 12,000 feet into a gigantic fault in the floor of the Caribbean Sea called the Cayman Trench or Trough. The 1,500-kilometer gash, four times the depth of the Grand Canyon, forms a boundary between two plates of earth's crust sliding past each other at a snail's pace.

Researchers aboard Alvin found a bizarre underwater world bearing proof of a constantly changing seafloor in their voyages into a vast rift in the Trench. And for the first time they explored massive cliff faces that reveal deep layers of the oceanic crust that covers two-thirds of the planet.

Strange Canyon Voyage

Dr. Robert D. Ballard, who led the Cayman Expedition of Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution with support from the National Science Foundation and United States Navy, takes readers on a voyage into the strange sea canyon in the August national Geographic.

"Maneuvering slowly up these massive scarps is like crawling on your hands and knees out of the Grand Canyon," writes Dr. Ballard. "It goes on for hours, until the sample bins are full, our exterior cameras have used up their film, and above us on the surface, night is coming on."

"Our real excitement comes later, after Alvin has been recovered and the dive is over. Then, and only then, can we break open our rocks and see their composition."

The rocks brought up from the awesome rift valley walls told a different story than do samples from canyons on land where deepest usually means oldest.

In the oceanic crust, rock is youngest at the spreading center or zone of creation and older as it moves up and away. Yet different layers are produced because upwelling magma crystallizes under varying conditions of pressure, temperature, and exposure to water.

Crust Lies Beneath Lava

In the seafloor, beneath the sediments and uppermost coating of lava, lies the principal segment of oceanic crust, called layer three, which normally reaches down an average of five kilometers.

Below that comes layers four, the upper mantle, now regarded as part of the thick rigid plate that is though to glide on the earth's plastic interior.

Time and again, Alvin dove up and down the east scarp of the rift valley to take samples of layer three. There, the rocks were composed of gabbro, a dense material that cooled and crystallized from magma while it was still deep underground.

Plunging still lower to 12-000 feet, the submersible's mechanical claw captured deeper, more basic rocks than even the gabbro of layer three.

"We had apparently passed entirely through layer three and entered the earth's upper mantle," reports Dr. Ballard.

Next year, Dr. Ballard hopes to return to the Cayman Trench with the Navy's big bathyscaphe, Trieste II. The craft will enable the scientists to drive across the valley floor and actually see the volcanic terrain at the very bottom of the rift

By Emory Kristof © National Geographic

CREATURE out of a Jules Verne fantasy, the research submersible Alvin took its own picture two miles down in the Caribbean's Cayman Trough. The Alvin never before had been seen operating in the deep. National Geographic's Emory Kristof and Alvin M. Chandler, working with Benthos, Inc., developed an ultra-wide-angle underwater camera able to withstand pressure of more than ten tons to the square inch. The camera and its separate flash unit rode to the depths in Alvin's revolving sample basket and were placed on the bottom by the vessel's remote-control claw. A photoflash from the submersible triggered the camera and its strobe light.

From the TAP Kitchen

CRUNCHY PEANUT BRITTLE

3 cups sugar
1-1/3 cups white corn syrup
1/2 cup water
4 cups raw peanuts
3 tsp. butter
1 tsp. vanilla
2-1/2 tsp. baking soda

Combine sugar, syrup and water in large saucepan. Boil until thread spins or until temperature reaches 250 degrees on candy thermometer. Add peanuts and stir continuously until temperature reaches 300 degrees (hard crack stage). Be careful that mixture does not burn. Pour onto 2 buttered 15-1/2x12-inch cookie sheets; spread quickly to about 1/4-inch thick. Cool, break into pieces. Yield: 2-1/2 to 3 lbs.
